Fighting for the Results You Deserve

Protect Your Company with Professional Business Litigation & Resolution

Business litigation involves defending or resolving legal disputes between companies and other parties. In many instances, it is used to describe defending companies accused of misconduct or being sued for a variety of reasons. What do business lawyers do? A business litigation lawyer is a legal professional who is able to manage both minor and significant legal concerns, including lawsuits that a company may need to navigate as part of its business. Depending on your case, the litigation process can include you are seeking to form a new business entity or create a business succession plan, or you need a contract reviewed, or have a business dispute, Greg T. Bailey and Associates will work with you to assess your situation and develop a comprehensive strategy. We assist small, medium and large businesses with the following:

Business Formation

All new business ventures or existing business operations can benefit from sound legal advice. Remember, starting a business involves considering what type of business entity to organize. Every choice you make for your business can have far-reaching consequences including tax implications, liability, and governance issues. Your choice of a business entity, as well as how the organizing documents are drafted, can significantly affect your profitability and exposure to liability.

At GTB Associates we will set your business with a strong foundation to avoid some of the pitfalls many new businesses experience.

Drafting and Reviewing Contracts

No matter what type of business you currently have or are planning to start, your company will have an agreement between two or more parties. It could be with your customers, staff, suppliers, etc. It is imperative that you have a well drafted agreement that can help avoid liability and costly litigation. The importance of having an attorney review any agreement that you are considering so that you fully understand the terms and potential exposure.

At Greg T. Bailey and Associates, we can draft or review any type of business contract, agreements, or proposals, which will give you the confidence to move forward knowing exactly where you stand legally.

Business Transactions

Thinking of buying or selling a business or are you seeking to develop a business relationship with another company? Without a written agreement spelling out the rights and obligations of each party, there is always a chance of a misunderstanding and liabilities that could adversely affect the relationship and/or your business. That is why protecting your business interests through legally enforceable documentation is imperative in any business transaction.

At Greg T. Bailey and Associates, we will create the proper documentation needed to ensure all parties are clear and adhere to their obligations to the business transaction.

Business Litigation & Dispute Resolution

Unfortunately, some business decisions you make can lead to disputes and/or lawsuits with vendors, customers, distributors and partners. Civil litigation, such as breach of contract lawsuits, fraud or negligence claims, and commercial disputes are an unfortunate part of operating a successful business.

You can rely on Greg T. Bailey and Associates litigation experience to represent you in any legal dispute that may arise.
